You are recreating a monster. The Microsoft plan is to dominate the information technology field with inferior, unstable and vulnerable products. You cannot run a government that utilizes such products. At a time when homeland security is front and center, this ruling sends a signal that the information industry will be dominated by a fundamentally flawed system architecture. His code is secret because its flaws cannot be exposed without his ruination. Everyone that uses Microsoft products knows that they crash and that each crash produces unintended and unpredictable consequences. Most of the recent virus attacks center on Microsoft products because they are the weakest. Linux/Unix are superior in every way but all PC's come with Windows so the beat goes on. The handling of this case will go down in history as a dark and perhaps sinister page.....Gene
